Trim area, Type area, Bleed explained

Ads should only ever be delivered to exact dimensions of bleed or type size, never to trim.

- Trim area is for information only and represents the physical size of the finished product after bleed has been removed during printing. Adverts that 'bleed' off the page will be trimmed to this size. Ads should only ever be delivered to bleed or type size, never to trim.
- Type area (also called Live area) is the area within the trim area where the type (or live information - text and images) should be contained. This ensures all vital information is visible to the reader.
- Bleed is an area 3mm larger than the trim size on all four sides and is required when adverts have pictures or colours going right to the edge of the page. So, for full colour adverts, please supply to the exact dimensions of bleed size. If you don't want to have bleed on your ad it should be supplied to the exact type area size.
